Charming Entertainment.

One of the most charming of the June entertainments, given for the benefit of Sheltering Arms Hospital, took place Thursday night in the home of Mr. J. Stanton Moore. The house, which is well adapted for such occasions, was beautifully decorated with palms and flowers. The lawn and porches were aglow with lanterns. A large Japanese umbrella was suspended from one of the large trees and around it was hung many lanterns of all colors, rendering the whole very attractive.

THE DINNER HOUR.

By OWEN MEREDITH-

The extract is from the long poem, "Lucile," Portrait, autograph and biographical sketch of the same author, whose real name was Robert Bulwer, Earl of Lytton, have already been printed in this series.

Orestee was the ton of Agamomnon, commander-in-chief of the Greeks in the Trojan war. He slew his mother because she had done likewise to his father. Tormenting spirits called "Furies" thereafter made life one prolonged torture for him.

HOUR of all hours, the most blest upon earth, Blest hour of our dinners! The land of his birth; The face of his first love; the bills that he owes; The twaddle of friends, and venom of foes; The sermon he heard when to church he last went; The money he borrowed, the money he spent; All of these things a man, I believe, may forget, And not be the worse for forgetting; but yet Never, never, oh, never! earth's luckiest sinner Hath unpunished forgotten the hour of his dinner! Indigestion, that conscience of every bad stomach, Shall relentlessly gnaw and pursue him with some ache Or some pain; and trouble, remorseless, his best ease. As the Furies once troubled the sleep of Orestes.

We may live without poetry, music and art; We may live without conscience, and live without heart; We may live without friends; we may live without books; But civilized man cannot live without cooks.

He may live without books,-what is knowledge but grieving? He may live without hope,-what is hope but deceiving? He may live without love,-what is passion but pining? But where is the man that can live without dining?

The Produce Market.

With large receipts and an active demand the commission merchants and wholesale country produce on Cary Street and thereaboute had lively business all day yestenlay. They handled a great deal of stuff and at prices that were in the main satisfactory. Postatoes that have been so plentful of late, are not now coming to market in such great bulk, and yesterday the floors in "the block" were pretty well cleaned of them. Chickens of the spring variety are much mare plentiful, and are now wholesaling in coop lots at 20 to 22 cents per pound. Pruits are steady at former quotations, as are also vegetables of all kinds.

On the Tobacco Exchange, yesterday, 204 packages of sun-cured tobacco were sampled and put on sale. They consisted almost entirely of fillers and the commoner grades and these grods are selling rather low. Very few wrappers were opened. for the reason that they were not here to be opened. A few packages only showed up and they were very small packages, the largest not weighing much over one hundred pounds. One of these small packages sold for $41, and two or three others brought a little above $30.

The total sales for the week, were 591 packages and the market closed dull. All grades except wrappers, are lower than the farmors would like to see them.

Man Fasted for Forty-Five Days, Living On Air and Water.

WORKED HARD ALL THE TIME

Thinks He Can Make It Fifty Days Next Time-Tells How He Did It.

(Special to The Times-Dispatch.) EW YORK, June 2.—That a n can work hard, sleep well and be merry without anything to cat for forty-five days has been proved in a most extraordinary manner by J. Austin Shaw, of Borough Park, Brooklyn. From April 9 to May 24 Mr. Shaw looked cooked, or if he did look upon it, it was without any great temptation to eat it. This fast exceeds Dr. Tanner's famous fasts and many other self-starvation rec-

In all that time Mr. Shaw worked from welve to eighteen hours a day, and at twelve to eighteen hours a day, and at the end of his forty-five days without food, instead of being weakened and enaciated, was, if anything, stronger and healthier than when he began to go without food. The explanation of this astonishing result lies largely in the fact that he had trained carefully and scientifically for three years in the seldom voluntarily practiced art of fasting.

Three years ago Mr. Shaw welghed 23 pounds. He was in fairly good health, although he suffered occasionally from rhoumatism. A book on "Perfect Health," by C. C. Raskell, which pre-although he suffered occasionally from rhoumatism. A book on "Perfect Health," by C. C. Raskell, which pre-scribed a gospel of abstinence in diet, made him a convert. It held that healthy old age depended solely on the knowl-edge of how to breathe, eat, drink, think and sleep.

Has Fasted at Intervals.

Has Fasted at Intervals.

Mr. Shaw immediately put the author's theories into practice. In the last three years he has fasted at intervals, each fast being a little longer than its predecessor, and he has lost sixty-two pounds in weight and gained greatly in strength and health. He has become an enthusiastic apostic of starvation as a means to long life, and has a record of his experiences backed up by photographers, taken every few days during his last and longest fast.

Mr. Shaw was asked last night how he accounted for the fact that forty-five days on water had left him sound and strong, while professional fasters were generally fearfully emaciated.

"Fresh air is the secret," he said.
"You may say I lived during the last six weeks on air. I gave up coffee and never take anything but a glass of water before noon. I never drink with my meals.

"As to my fasts, I began with three days' abstinence at a time, with two weeks between each fast. Gradually I lengthened the time of going without food to ten days, until recently I found I could go forty-five days without eating without the least discomfort. I have no doubt I could have gone on for fifty days or more, but I thought I better not make the test hard.

'I mean to live to be 100 years old and think I am on the right track. There is no reason we should not all live to think I am on the right track. be 100.

The first two days of my fast were "The first two days of my rast were a little hard, but after that it was easy. I sometimes drank a little weak lemonade, and once a week or so a glass of unfermented grape juice. The rest of my diet consisted of water, both hot and cold.

"Temptations to break it? They did not amount to much. It wasn't the easiest thing in the world to carve for my family when we had a particularly good Sunday dinner, but I did not really feel the need of food.

"This below me to the worst tweeters." 'This brings me to the most important point of all. I had absolute confidence in myself and knew I was not in any danger. A doctor examined me every day. My pulse was normal, at 90, and never went above 72, when I sprinted for never went above 72, when I sprinted for a train. Each day I received a letter of encouragement and advice from Haskell. My wife helped me, too, by her faith. The mind plays a big role in health fasting. Faith and fresh air are the two important elements.

Cold Baths and Exercise. "I took my usual exercise and cold bath in the morning, and worked each day in the city from twelve to eighteen day in the city from twelve to eighteen hours. My work keeps me out of doors much of the time."

Mr. Shaw intends to keep up his periodical fasting for the rest of his life and to adjure meat at all times and sny food before noon. He is connected with a weekly horticultural paper, and is a mant somewhat under fifty years. Three of his daughters are on the stage, one of them was a papama girl in "The Liberty Belles." The youngest of them has foresworn the hot birds and cold bottles, which are popularly supposed to be the correct after-theatre diet, and is almost as ardent a vegetarian non-eater as her father.

Mr. Shaw cautions those who would seek foodless health not to start in too ambitiously. Three days is about all the beginner can stand. He himself looks as fresh after his recent remarkable fast as if he just returned from an ideal vacation. He lost twenty-six pounds, a little more than one-half a pound a day, but there is not a wrinkle to show it. He asserts that though he worked more than usual, he did not at any time feel the least fatigued. He does not habitually use alcohol, nor is he a smoker, though he was never a total abstainer.

evident from these returns that the disturbance to business from tardy spring weather had no serious effect during May, although the results could hardly have been expected so promptly, and the trade reports indicated that commercial payments were increasingly prompt.
